

THE BARN

at turon gates

ARCHITECT

To help us we get in touch with the Australian outback
 Jon (left) leaves from the Australian TV programme House Rules. It is located in a rare and unspoiled wet-dry region. The barn is an elevated space to be used by the surrounding nature which is so unusual to us. The barn is made of 200mm long, narrow boards, making sure that every single stone in the house will blend into the surrounding area. The profile of the house is very much inspired by their typical Dutch roofline with their 47° slope.

VISION

To create a sustainable home located in the beautiful Australian coast surrounded by nature within the kangaroo and eucalyptus with amazing views of the water and the Blue Mountains.

To showcase a combination of Danish design and Australian craftsmanship. To combine local products like olive oil, timber and stone with materials with the technology of daylight and clean ventilation showcased by Valeo.

As the house is 100% off-grid and only runs on solar power, we plan to heat the house by two wood-burning stoves – one at each end of the house. We also plan to do a Minor 7000 on a pedestal which gives a dramatic view to the far through the openwork side and floor glass. We would very much like to do some with the glass floor protection which is such an elegant way of covering our wooden floors.

BACKGROUND

We are a Danish family living in Sydney. We like the city, but long to have a get away we can escape to at the weekends and holidays. We dream about a simple but beautiful house by the coast. That are we spend so on as Danes, because we don't have any connection to Denmark. We still do love with the area. Three Great Island in Blue Mountains – 2h from from Sydney.

We wanted to make an affordable and sustainable house. To make it really get handy. To make it Danish get Australian.

vision/project

We are renovating a dark, old and cold house in Sydney's inner west at Leichhardt and turning it into a bright, new and warm gorgeous family home.

The house is originally a 1920's double fronted bungalow and we will stay true to the inner west appearance of it at the front but the back will be Danish contemporary with double glazed windows, heated floor and Velux skylights.

So green and energy efficient.

photoshoot/gift voucher

As we are both photographers we would be delighted to swap with gift vouchers to DR Design Kitchens best clients.

Gift vouchers to gift to your past, present and future clients offering a family home study and location photo shoot.

And of course with the families written consent (which we would get for you) featuring photos of their home and kitchen area for your website and marketing purposes.

This could be also an opportunity to photograph the new kitchens in situ for your website too !
